

FRIENDS of NEVADA WILDERNESS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

September 17, 2009

Contact:

Kurt Kuznicki, Wilderness Program Director, kurt@nevadawilderness.org; (775) 745-3119

www.nevadawilderness.org

Graffiti removed by Wilderness Volunteers

Beautiful Fletcher Canyon in the Mt. Charleston Wilderness was recently marred by vandals who painted black and white graffiti on canyon walls. With spray bottles of graffiti remover and a lot of elbow grease, three volunteers working with Friends of Nevada Wilderness removed this blight from the canyon on September 16th.

Fletcher Canyon is a popular hike with locals of all ages because of its easy access, gentle grade and rugged beauty. Long time resident John Hiatt who was one of the volunteers removing the graffiti said, "I do this because when I go to the outdoors I like to see it clean and the way nature had intend it to be."

"People really care about the Mt. Charleston Wilderness, and want to take care of it" says Kurt Kuznicki, Wilderness Program Director for Friends of Nevada Wilderness, "there's still plenty more work to be done".

To sign-up as a wilderness volunteer and get more details about future projects, contact Kurt at (775) 745-3119.

For more information about Friends' Wilderness Volunteer Projects visit
www.nevadawilderness.org

-